LOGLINE

Brighton 4th tells the story of Kakhi, a Georgian ex-wrestler who travels from Tbilisi to Brighton Beach, Brooklyn, to help his son Soso find a way out of a gambling debt.

SYNOPSIS

Former wrestling champion Kakhi (Levan Tediashvili, himself a former Olympic wrestling champion) always has his family on his conscience, and in Brighton 4th, this leads him on a journey from his home in the Republic of Georgia to visit his son Soso (Giorgi Tabidze) in the Russian-speaking neighborhood of Brighton Beach, Brooklyn. There he finds Soso living in a shabby boarding house populated by a colorful group of fellow Georgian immigrants. And Soso is not studying medicine, as Kakhi believed, but is working for a moving company and has accrued a $14,000 gambling debt to a local mob boss. Kakhi sets his mind to helping his hapless son out of his debt, leading to situations as often comic as they are dire.

LONG SYNOPSIS

Kakhi, a former wrestling champion from Georgia, travels to New York to visit his son Soso, who lives in the immigrant neighborhood of Brighton Beach, Brooklyn. Soso left for New York a few years earlier in order to pass medical exams and become an American doctor.

In Brooklyn, Kakhi finds out that Soso works at a moving company, lives in a boarding house and, instead of studying for exams, spends his time gambling. By the time Kakhi arrives, Soso has accumulated a $14,000 gambling debt, which he owes to Amir, an ex-wrestler and local mafia guy. Soso has a few days left to pay off this debt. In addition, Soso needs money to arrange a fake marriage with a social worker, Lena, to obtain a US green card.

Kakhi gives Soso $2,000 he brought with him from home. Father and son go to see Amir at a local restaurant to offer this money as partial payment. There is a card game in progress. Amir won't accept a partial payment, only the whole amount. One of the players has to leave and gives his place at the table to Soso. Soso starts playing and loses Kakhi's money. He starts arguing at the table and is dragged outside and beaten by Amir's thugs. He is told that he must pay the debt and that they know where he lives.

Soso hides from the thugs in Lena's apartment. Kakhi talks to his wife Maka on Skype and tells her that things are OK with their son. Kakhi is asked by a housemate from the boarding house to help him get money from a Kazakh man who extorts money from Georgian women who clean motels in New Jersey. Kakhi takes part in the kidnapping of the Kazakh guy, but after learning that he needs money for his sick father in Alma-Ata, he lets him go.

Kakhi's last option to help his son is to talk one on one with Amir. Kakhi offers him a wrestling challenge — if Kakhi wins, Soso's debt will be forgiven. Amir agrees. They go to the beach. Kakhi wins the wrestling match, but his heart fails. He is brought to the hostel, where he dies. Fellow Georgian men come to the house to sing a farewell song to Kakhi — the champion.

DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT, Levan Koguashvili

Brighton Beach is a neighborhood in Brooklyn mainly inhabited by immigrants from the former USSR. It's a place where one can easily survive without speaking English as postings around the area are mainly in Russian and in the streets, Russian, Georgian, or Armenian is more commonly spoken than English.

Brighton Beach is often the first stop in America for people who have just arrived from the post-Soviet world. It's a place where they get used to being immigrants, where they make their first steps into the "real America" of New York.

But for many, America — the land of opportunity — begins in Brighton Beach and ends in Brighton Beach, because they can't leave that place. They are unable to adjust to the "real America" and to learn English, and so they stay forever in the familiar Russian world of the neighborhood. It is a social and often mental state by which one is in the US and the non-existent Soviet Union at the same time. One wants to start a new life, but can't get rid of one's past.

Brighton Beach is a very cinematic place where our story — a universal and eternal story of the relationship between father and son — takes place. This is the combination that I believe makes our film interesting — the unique character and texture of Brighton Beach on the one hand and a human, universal, story on the other. Brighton 4th is a Georgian film that takes place in outer Brooklyn. And the film is about Georgians whose behavior, mentality, songs, and tragicomedy are also highly cinematic to me. The film is a mixture of these two cinematic phenomena: Georgia and New York.

Adding to the film's dual sense of place is the fact that, in addition to the professional actors at the film's center, the cast is largely made up of Russian-speaking non-professionals who live and work in Brighton Beach and it is shot in real locations in the area.

FILM TEAM BIOS:

Levan Koguashvili – Director, Writer, and Producer

Born in Tbilisi in 1973, Levan Koguashvili studied Film Production at the Georgian State University of Theatre and Cinema in Tbilisi, but a year after he began his studies a war broke out in Georgia and he started to work as a journalist for the first independent Georgian television station. Between 1995 and 1999, Levan studied Film Directing at the Russian State Institute of Film (VGIK) in Moscow. In 2007, he graduated from Tisch School of the Art's Graduate Film Program at New York University.

Levan's short film, The Debt (2005), won a number of awards at international film festivals and was in the official selection of the 2006 Sundance Film Festival. His documentaries, Father and Son (2003) and The Women from Georgia (2008), have also taken part in many film festivals and been awarded prizes.

His first feature film, Street Days, was an international success. The film premiered in the Tiger Award Competition of the Rotterdam Film Festival in 2010 and was regarded by many critics as the beginning of a new wave of modern Georgian cinema.

According to Jay Weissberg of Variety, "Georgian cinema has a new star in director Levan Koguashvili, whose superb neorealist drama, 'Street Days,' is just the calling card the beleaguered country needs. Lensed with impressive assurance and boasting powerful perfs from a combo of established pros and non-pros, 'Street Days' looks poised to lead a Georgian renaissance spearheaded by fests and advancing into the arthouse circuit."

In 2013, Levan made his second narrative feature, Blind Dates, which world-premiered at the Berlin International Film Festival and received multiple festival awards.

In 2016, he directed the documentary Gogita's New Life. The film received an IDFA nomination for the best feature-length documentary and was screened at festivals around the world.

Their first project was Levan Koguashvili's documentary Gogita's New Life, which received an IDFA nomination for the best feature-length documentary in 2016.

Producer Rodonaya and director Koguashvili first talked about Brighton 4th in 2015. Levan pitched two ideas: one Georgian film and one New York Brighton Beach story. Brighton Beach got the green light. Later, after the Georgian National Film Centre and Bulgarian National Film Centre supported the project, co-producer Stefan Kitanov came on board, followed by Koguashvili's longtime producer Olena Yershova. Yershova pitched the project to French producer Michele Merkt who joined the project along with his wife Kateryna Merkt.

Olena Yershova – Producer

Olena Yershova graduated as a film director at the Kyiv State Theater and Film Institute. Her graduation short film, Demoniada, premiered in the short film competition at the Locarno Film Festival.

She executive produced My Joy by Sergei Loznitsa (Germany/ Ukraine/Netherlands), which premiered in competition at Cannes in 2010 and received numerous awards worldwide. In 2011 she created the company TatoFilm, which operates in Ukraine and Turkey. She has produced nine feature films and three feature documentaries, which received more than 140 awards at international film festivals. Those include: Everything Will Not Be Fine by Adrian Pirvu (2020); Volcano by Roman Bondarchuk (2018); Frost by Sarunas Bartas (2017); Falling by Maryna Stepanska (2017); Gogita's New Life by Levan Koguashvili (2016); Motherland by Senem Tuzen (2015); and Blind Dates by Levan Koguashvili (2013). Her latest film, Anatolian Leopard by Emre Kayis Lab, is in post-production.

Olena Yershova is the head of the Antalya Film Forum in the frame of the Antalya IFF (2019 - 2020) and has served as a member of the jury of Karlovy Vary IFF, Warsaw IFF, European Film Festival in Lecce, Odessa IFF, Ankara IFF, Haifa IFF, and Minsk IFF Listapad. She is a member of the Asian Pacific Screen Academy, the European Film Academy, the Ukrainian Film Academy, and the European Producers Club.

Michel Merkt is a producer known for Elle (2016), Toni Erdmann (2016) and Capharnaüm (2018).

Boris Frumin – Writer

Boris Frumin, born in 1947, is a Latvian film director and scriptwriter. Frumin's film Errors of Youth was screened in the Un Certain Regard section at the 1989 Cannes Film Festival. His other films as a writer-director, Black and White (1992) and Viva Castro! (1994), premiered at the Sundance and Locarno festivals respectively. His project Siberian Triangle was presented at the 32nd Moscow International Film Festival. Brighton 4th marks his third collaboration as a screenwriter with Levan Koguashvili, having written the scripts for Street Days and Blind Dates.
